Dear Ms Tuazon,

Thank you very much for your message addressed to President Ursula VON DER LEYEN.

The European Commission welcomes the engagement of citizens and civil society organizations on matters of climate action, energy policy, and sustainable development. Public participation plays an important role in informing policy discussions and ensuring that the European Union remains responsive to the concerns and aspirations of people both within Europe and around the world.

The European Union remains firmly committed to achieving climate neutrality by 2050. As part of these efforts, the Commission continues to advance policies that support the deployment of renewable energy, improve energy efficiency, strengthen energy security, and facilitate a fair and socially just transition for citizens, workers, and communities.

We acknowledge the concerns raised regarding fossil fuel subsidies and recognize the importance of ensuring that public resources are aligned with the Union's climate and energy objectives. The Commission regularly assesses existing policy frameworks and works closely with Member States, the European Parliament, stakeholders, and international partners to support the transition toward a more sustainable and resilient energy system.

Yours sincerely,
